

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 11 May 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Many central and northern areas will stay dry with sunny spells, although some north-eastern coasts and hills seeing low cloud. Cloudier and more humid conditions moving across southern parts with locally heavy, possibly thundery, showers but some warm sunny spells. Milder overnight for many with cloud and showery outbreaks of rain steadily moving north.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Warm, increasingly humid with sunny spells on Friday. Some persistent, locally heavy, spells of rain likely in the west, while scattered heavy, possibly thundery, showers affect other areas. Some rain in the northwest on Saturday. Otherwise sunny spells and scattered heavy, possibly thundery, showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.