

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 02 May 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Sunny spells and scattered showers are likely to occur through today with some heavy downpours, these locally thundery with hail in Scotland, dying down towards evening. It will become cloudy during this evening, with mostly light rain spreading slowly into many western areas.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

It will be cloudy in the west and north of the UK on Saturday, with outbreaks of mostly light rain. Central and eastern parts will be dry for much of the day, but increasingly cloudy. Rain, sometimes heavy, will occur in the west on Sunday, with occasional showers in the east where it will be warmer.

(C) Crown Copyright 2008. Published by the Met Office.