Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
It will be a cloudy start across southern England with patchy light rain or drizzle. However, further north it will be much a brighter start, albeit rather chilly. These brighter skies will then gradually filter south through the morning leading to a fine afternoon for most with sunny spells. However, it will once again feel cool in the northerly winds.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
High pressure will dominate the weather through Sunday and Monday and bring mainly dry conditions with variable cloud and sunny spells. However, some patchy drizzle may affect the far northwest on Sunday. It will turn chilly where skies clear overnight.
