

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 09 May 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Western parts will see cloud and some rain, moving gradually north. Afternoon showers will develop in central areas, some of these heavy and possibly thundery. Coastal mist or low cloud is likely in the southwest and northeast. Elsewhere it will be dry with sunny spells, and warm to very warm generally.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

It will be sometimes cloudy in the west and north on Saturday with rain or showers, some heavy, and continuing coastal low cloud, but mostly dry with sunny spells elsewhere. Sunday will see afternoon showers in the north, otherwise dry, often sunny conditions. The weekend will remain warm.

(C) Crown Copyright 2008. Published by the Met Office.