

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 09 Jun 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloudy with rain for Scotland; elsewhere bright spells with showers, at first in the west but more focused in the east later. Improving later with showers easing and more widespread sunshine. It will be a dry evening but rain will move in from the southwest, spreading across many areas overnight. Rain will be heavy and persistent in some western areas.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Breezy with a band of rain affecting many areas on Saturday; turning bright and showery in the northwest. Southeastern areas mostly dry with some warm sunny spells through the weekend. Showers will continue on Sunday in the northwest, remaining breezy.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.