Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow :
Rain lingering in Shetland until evening. Elsewhere, rather cloudy with showers, some perhaps heavy and thundery during day, largely dying out at night. A band of showers will then develop across Northern Ireland and western Scotland overnight. Quite windy in north, though strong winds soon easing around Northern Isles. Warm in southeast, temperatures near average elsewhere. Becoming locally misty in south during the night.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Blustery showers will affect Scotland and Northern Ireland, which will ease across Northern Ireland on Friday. Elsewhere, sunny intervals and showers, heavier showers on Thursday, more sunshine on Friday. Warm in south, temperatures near average elsewhere.
