

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 01 Nov 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloud and occasional rain across southeastern parts of England clearing this afternoon. Showers in the far northwest. Otherwise a drier spell with some sunshine, before rain and strong winds spread into western areas this afternoon. This wet and windy weather will spread across most parts through the evening and overnight, though perhaps not reaching the far southeast by dawn.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:

Cloud and patchy rain will linger across the far southeast. Otherwise breezy with sunny spells and blustery showers, heavier and most frequent in the north and west. Feeling cooler. Sunshine and showers Monday and Tuesday, showers locally heavy and frequent.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.