++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Showery rain, occasionally heavy, affecting much of northern Scotland and Northern Ireland. Elsewhere becoming breezy with some sunny periods and showers, these locally heavy and thundery, especially across east and southeast England and northeast Scotland. There'll be further showery rain around tonight, especially over northern, western and central parts. Rather cloudy at times elsewhere, but drier and mild.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Cooler, breezy and largely cloudy on Wednesday, with rain, or scattered showers, slowly becoming confined to more eastern parts. Drier, brighter conditions developing later in the west. Thursday starting chilly for some, but largely dry with sunny spells. Winds ease.
