

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 21 Jun 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Heavy, thundery showers or longer periods of rain will affect much of the country today, with only limited bright or sunny intervals likely to develop. Further outbreaks of rain are expected overnight, with some very heavy rain over southern Scotland and Northern England. It will become increasingly windy across all areas, especially tonight.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Rain will continue over most parts of the UK on both Friday and Saturday, although southern and southwestern areas may see some dry, bright weather for a time. It will remain windy on Friday, especially in the west and southwest, but winds should ease on Saturday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.