

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 28 Aug 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Very warm across much of England and Wales today, perhaps even hot in the southeast with prolonged spells of sunshine and light winds. However, in contrast it will be cooler and windier in the northwest with cloud and rain gradually spreading across Scotland, Northern Ireland and later into northwest England.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Light rain across central parts on Tuesday will fizzle out bringing brighter and fresher conditions with scattered showers in Scotland. Still warm in the southeast, with the chance of thundery showers later, before turning fresher for all on Wednesday with sunshine and showers. Thundery rain may persist in the southeast.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.