++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A bright start across Britain, with fair weather cloud developing through the day, perhaps giving an isolated light shower in the afternoon. The best of the sunshine found towards coastal areas. Remaining dry overnight with clear spells developing, perhaps prolonged at times, however, feeling less chilly compared to recent nights. Cloudier towards northwestern parts of the UK. Winds remaining light.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Remaining warm and dry for much of the UK through Sunday and Monday, with sunny spells and light winds. Always cloudier towards northwestern areas, with the risk of some light and patchy rain in the far northwest at times.
