

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 01 May 2007

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Isolated showers in the far southwest at first, and some mist and low cloud near northeast coasts, but for most of the UK another dry, warm and sunny day is expected. Central and southern parts will be rather windy. Dry and clear tonight although mist and low cloud will spread inland from northeast coasts.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:
Clear and chilly nights will be followed by warm and sunny days once any mist and low cloud has cleared, although some will persist near North Sea coasts where it will stay much cooler. Winds mostly light and from the north or northeast.

(C) Crown Copyright 2007. Published by the Met Office.