

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 03 Mar 2007

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloudy with light rain over eastern parts this morning. Largely fine with sunny spells and just scattered showers elsewhere. Eastern areas should become fine through the day. Mild with moderate westerly winds. Mostly dry with clear spells tonight and becoming chilly with some frost. Wet and windy weather will reach the southwest before dawn.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Dry in the north and east initially on Sunday, but cloudy, wet, windy weather will spread across all parts from the southwest with some gales and heavy rain, especially in the west. Sunny spells and showers generally on Monday but becoming wet and windy overnight. Mild.

(C) Crown Copyright 2007. Published by the Met Office.