

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 10 May 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Wet and windy for many northern and northwestern areas, with some heavy downpours. There'll be variable cloud elsewhere, but some warm sunny spells will develop. Rain will clear southeastwards into northern England and Wales overnight, followed by clear spells and blustery showers. It'll stay dry with clear periods in the southeast.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Rain across Wales and northern England will turn increasingly light and patchy as it moves southeast tomorrow, eventually easing. Sunny spells elsewhere with isolated showers in the far north. Windy in the north on Tuesday with scattered blustery showers. Mainly dry in the south with some warm sunshine.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.