It will be windy in the south to start with showers already in western parts.
The showers could again turn heavy and thundery as they push eastwards, and may become long lasting in the north. The best of the sunny spells will be in the southeast but some showers will arrive here also.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

On both Friday and Saturday further showers will run in from the southwest, becoming locally heavy. There will be sunny spells in between these with the best of the sunshine most likely in the east and northeast. The winds in the south should continue to ease.
