++ Valid for broadcast at 2159

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Southern England and Wales will start cold and sunny before cloud thickens through the afternoon, however it should remain dry throughout with some brightness. Elsewhere, it will be largely cloudy with patchy rain at times, although all parts could see some brighter spells. It will be a milder day across most of the country.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

It will be rather cloudy and cool with patchy rain on Saturday, especially across northern areas, but there may be some brightness elsewhere. Similar conditions persisting into Sunday before more persistent and heavier rain pushes in from the west through the latter part of the day.
