Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Scotland, except the far west and southwest, also northeast England, cool, and cloudy with rain at times, some rain extending southwards to other eastern counties of England for a time this afternoon. Elsewhere, cool and breezy with sunny spells and scattered showers. Tonight, mainly dry with clear periods, but some rain returning to western Scotland and Northern Ireland later.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Mostly cloudy Saturday, some rain in the north and especially northwest, mainly dry in the south and east, some sunny spells towards the southeast. Rain and stronger winds spreading eastwards Sunday, but the far south and southeast dry with sunny spells.
