

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 25 Jan 2018

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Occasionally heavy showers in the west will spread eastwards through the course of the day. However, it will remain largely dry with sunny spells for southeastern England during daylight hours. Overnight the showers will weaken and clear eastwards leaving a mostly dry night, although staying cloudier in the east; and with a local frost possible in the west.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Friday, a chilly start but mostly dry with a generally light northwesterly wind. Some good sunny spells at times too. Rain and cloud arriving in the west later. On Saturday cloud and occasionally heavy rain will spread to all parts.

(C) Crown Copyright 2018. Published by the Met Office.