Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Heavy rain in the south and west will spread northeastwards to all areas during the day, some of this torrential with a risk of localised flooding, especially over Northern Ireland where the rain is likely to linger for much of the day. It should become somewhat drier later in the southwest, but remaining cloudy.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Persistent rain will linger over northeastern Scotland during Friday, and then perhaps return southwards again during Saturday towards Northern England. Elsewhere though, there should be a good deal of sunshine mixed with scattered heavy showers on both days. Patchy frost is likely overnight under clear skies.
