

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 01 Apr 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain will clear eastward early, with showers following in the north, heavy at times over Scotland. It will be mostly dry and mild elsewhere with sunny spells, and generally windy with strong to gale and gusty winds over northern Britain, easing a little tonight. Showers will clear Scotland overnight, light rain developing in western and southern areas.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

It will be often be cloudy over most of the United Kingdom, although there will be sunny breaks in places and it will be mild to warm especially in the south. Occasional light rain is likely, mainly in western and southern Britain.

(C) Crown Copyright 2008. Published by the Met Office.