++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rather cloudy with the best of any brightness expected towards the west, though a cloudier day than yesterday likely in the far north. Feeling cool and staying dry for most, however a few showers are likely. Mostly dry overnight with clearer spells developing, allowing a slight frost in parts of the north and some mist. Light east or southeasterly winds.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:
Largely dry Tuesday but with more in the way of sunshine, and feeling milder for many. Cooler and cloudier across Scotland with a few showers towards the east. Some reasonable periods of sunshine are likely during Wednesday. Patchy overnight frosts.
