Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A less windy day. Sunny intervals and wintry showers in the north, mainly hills. A bright start further south, but increasingly cloudy in the west through the morning, then spreading east and bringing some rain. Rain continuing in parts of the south and west overnight, heavy in places. Clear and cold in the north and northeast, with wintry showers easing.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Cold to start for many Thursday, and bright in the north and east with a few showers. Cloudy in the south and west with some rain, spreading slowly northeastwards later. Friday breezy with rain at first and drier conditions later.
