

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 06 Oct 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloud and rain will gradually clear the southeast to give a mainly fine day countrywide with some good sunny spells. Parts of the north may see a few showers however, while the far south of England may stay rather cloudy. Cold, dry and clear overnight, with localised fog patches developing and with rural frost in central and northern areas.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Dry and fine for most on Sunday, with isolated showers in the far north.
Becoming increasingly cloudy in the southwest during the afternoon, with rain later. Remaining fine in the north on Monday, cloudier in the south with some rain.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.