

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 03 Feb 2013

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most places will have a cloudy morning as a band of rain moves southeastwards across the UK. Sunny spells will develop in central and northern England and eastern Scotland, but it will stay cloudy and damp elsewhere. Winds will strengthen across the UK overnight with gales and increasingly wintry showers in Scotland, whilst other areas become largely dry.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Very windy, especially on Monday when severe gales will affect parts of the northwestern of the UK. Wintry showers will affect mainly northern areas on Monday, but will become much more widespread across all areas by Tuesday. It will feel cold.

(C) Crown Copyright 2013. Published by the Met Office.