

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 08 Oct 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain will clear Shetland by early afternoon before further rain reaches the Western Isles later. Elsewhere a few showers will develop, but it'll stay mostly dry with some sunshine. A chilly night will follow for many under clearer skies, whilst it'll stay cloudier in the far northwest with some rain.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Most places will stay dry over the next couple of days with plenty of sunny spells by day followed by chilly nights. Although it'll feel cool as a brisk breeze blows, there may be one or two showers, and the far northwest will be cloudier at times with some rain.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.