++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Sunny-spells and blustery-showers are expected across all parts. Some heavy showers are likely perhaps with hail, and showers will be wintry over hills too. Eastern parts will see the driest, brightest conditions. Overnight, rain and gales or severe-gales will spread to many areas from the west with some damaging gusts.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Very windy on Monday with severe-gales and some damaging gusts in parts of the south and west of England and Wales, but less-strong winds further north. Many places will see rain at times, again with snow on the high-ground of the north. Windy with further rain or showers on Tuesday.
