REMARKS.

The atmospherical pressure is increasing generally over the British Isles this morning; and temperature has decreased since yesterday, — especially on the southern and eastern coasts of England. The winds have veered towards northwest with finer weather.

Sea disturbance.

REMARKS.

In the north and west the barometrical pressure has decreased since yesterday; and in the same districts the winds have backed to the southwestward, and freshened with rain. On the south and east coasts the increase in pressure has continued; and the winds are principally westerly and light - with an overcast sky.

Sea disturbance.

REMARKS.

The pressure of the atmosphere has increased considerably in the north of the British Isles, since yesterday, and slightly elsewhere; but it is again decreasing in the south of England this morning, accompanied with rain and fog. The winds are still westerly and moderate on the south coast of England, with an overcast sky: elsewhere they are southwesterly, light to fresh.

Barometer corrected and reduced to 32° at sea level. Thermometer exposed in shade. Extreme Force and Direction since last Report. Z.—calm. Weather: b.—blue sky; c.—clouds (detached); f.—fog; h.—hail; l.—lightning; m.—misty (hazy); o.—overcast (dull); r.—rain; s.—snow; t.—thunder. Rain-fall, snow or hail (melted), since last report. Sea disturbance.

REMARKS.

Barometrical pressure is still greatest in the south, but is decreasing over the whole of the British Isles and on the west Coast of France. Over the United Kingdom the winds are southwesterly, light to fresh; and the weather is overcast: rain and fog prevail in the south of Ireland. From Brest to Rochefort the wind is northeasterly, and light.

REMARKS.

The atmospheric pressure has increased in the north and decreased considerably in the south; accompanied, as might be expected, with an easterly wind—especially between Yarmouth and Rochefort, where the difference of pressure is the greatest. Rain has fallen in the north and west, where the winds are very light and variable.
