

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 02 Jun 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Heavy rain will move eastwards across the UK, becoming patchier, and leaving brighter fresher conditions and the odd shower in western parts. Hot and humid air in the south-east will trigger heavy showers and thunderstorms during the afternoon. These showers will ease in the evening, so most of us will see evening sunshine and a dry night.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:
Fresher weather will follow on Saturday with sunny spells. Occasional showers are possible, especially in Wales, the south-west and perhaps East Anglia. More frequent thundery showers will affect Scotland and Northern Ireland. Sunshine and showers will feature on Sunday, more prevalent further north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.