Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow :
A misty start and staying rather cloudy in much of England and Wales, though some sunshine, chiefly in the north. Also cloudy at first across Northern Ireland and Scotland, then sunny intervals developing before cloud increases again, followed by rain and strengthening winds overnight. Feeling warm in the sunshine. England and Wales staying dry, though mostly cloudy, with mist and patchy fog in the southeast.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:
Scotland and Northern Ireland cloudy with outbreaks of rain on Friday. Some sunshine in England and Wales, quite dull in the southeast for a time. Saturday generally brighter, sunnier and warmer in the south.
