

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 07 Apr 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Parts of England and Wales will be cloudy at first with rain in places. It becomes drier and sunnier during the day in all but the southeast of England. Most parts remain dry and clear overnight. Scotland and Northern Ireland will have sunshine and showers for much of the day, becoming cloudier overnight with rain at times.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Cloud and outbreaks of rain in Scotland and Northern Ireland spread into England on Thursday, although many central and southern parts remain dry with some sunshine. Continuing largely dry and sunny on Friday, although further outbreaks of rain are possible in the north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.