++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain for many today, this persistent and heavy for northwest England, north Wales and Northern Ireland. Somewhat drier in other areas, but with a scattering of showers, these heavy and thundery in places. Light winds in central Scotland, but strong elsewhere, with gales on southern and western coasts. Mostly dry in the south tonight, whilst rain persists in northern areas.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Cloud and rain persisting in the north on Saturday, with a mixture of brightness and showers in the south. Overnight and then through Sunday, brisk westerly winds will bring a further swathe of persistent, occasionally heavy rain across the UK.
