

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 28 Oct 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Many southeastern areas will be warm and sunny today, however, heavy rain with hill fog and gusty winds in the northwest will move across central parts through the afternoon. Rain will continue into southern Britain this evening, becoming slow moving. Aside from showers in the far north, fine weather will follow across northwestern areas, giving frost and patchy fog overnight.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:
Generally fine and dry with sunny periods over northern Britain on Wednesday but it will remain cloudy and mild in the south with some rain. It will be rather cloudy across the UK on Thursday with rain in the north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.