

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 04 Jun 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloud and rain, heavy and persistent in parts of England, spreading northwards, into parts of Scotland later. Feeling cool under the cloud and rain. Brighter, showery conditions in the northwest. Tonight, rain gradually clearing from the southwest, but the north and east will keep the cloud and rain, which will be heavy at times, and persistent in far northeastern parts.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Rain in the north and east on Thursday will become confined to north and east Scotland. Elsewhere largely dry and bright with some sunshine. Cloud and rain spreading from the southwest on Friday, with some heavy bursts likely at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.