

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 05 May 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Southern counties of England will be cloudy with outbreaks of rain today, but will become drier and clearer in all but southeast England tonight. Scotland will see showers today and tonight, these wintry on high ground. Most other areas will be sunny at first but scattered showers may develop later. It will be cold tonight with a frost in places.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
A cold start on Sunday with a widespread frost. Then most places will have some sunny periods, but with a scattering of showers too. It will become windy on Monday with rain spreading from the west to affect most places.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.