

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 16 Aug 2011

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A generally cloudy start with outbreaks of rain in places. It should become generally drier and brighter through the afternoon, although scattered, heavy showers may develop. Also it will remain cloudy and wet across northern Scotland and remain so until well into the night, whereas elsewhere seeing a dry night with clear spells.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:
Cloud will steadily increase across southern and many central parts on Wednesday, with outbreaks of light rain for many by the end of the day. This rain then turning heavy and possibly thundery on Thursday. Further north a mixture of sunshine and showers is expected throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2011. Published by the Met Office.