

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 04 Dec 2009

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloud and outbreaks of rain will spread across Northern Ireland, Wales and southwest England during daylight hours. Ahead of the rain dry with sunny spells, apart for early showers across eastern England. Overnight cloud and rain will continue east across Scotland and the rest of England, the rain turning occasionally heavy. Broken cloud and showers will follow to western areas.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Saturday rain will persist across northeast Scotland, while showers clear from southeast England and rain exits from northeast England. Elsewhere dry and bright, although later rain will spread across western areas. Sunday rain will clear east, with heavy showers following.

(C) Crown Copyright 2009. Published by the Met Office.