++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Sunshine and blustery showers are the order of the day, including heavy downpours for some, with hail or thunder. It will be mainly cloudy in the south with showers or longer outbreaks of rain. Outbreaks of rain in the southeast will soon clear overnight. However, showers will continue in the north and east but many eastern counties will stay dry.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Sunshine and showers are likely tomorrow too, mainly concentrated in Northern Ireland, Wales and the western side of England, though some heavy downpours will move eastwards by evening. Sunday will be wet and windy, with rain concentrated in the west.
