

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 30 Mar 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Northern and western parts of the United Kingdom will be rather cloudy and cool throughout with a chance of some patchy drizzle. Most other areas will have a another warm, dry day with some sunshine. It will become more generally cloudy tonight with patchy drizzle in northern and western areas perhaps spreading into central and eastern parts.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

It will gradually become generally cooler and cloudier with some light rain possible at times, particularly towards the northwest of the UK. However some bright or sunny conditions are also likely, especially across southern and central parts, where it will still feel warm.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.