

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 02 Feb 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Eastern parts will have the best of the sunshine today, with the showers mainly in the west, northwest and near southern coasts. It will remain fairly windy, but less so than Saturday for most. Overnight it will be dry apart from a few lingering showers, before a band of rain and strengthening winds, spreads into far western parts by dawn.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Dry and bright in the east on Monday, however the rain and strong winds in the far west will slowly move eastwards through the day. Clearer and more showery weather will follow, bringing sunny spells and blustery showers for Tuesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.