

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 27 Sep 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Any mist and murk will slowly clear this morning, with bright or sunny spells developing for many. However, a band of rain and strengthening winds will move into western parts through the afternoon, with some heavy bursts at times. Rain will continue to move east through the evening and overnight, with all parts seeing some rain by dawn.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Any rain in the east on Thursday morning should steadily clear to leave a dry day for most places with some pleasantly warm sunny spells. A band of rain will then sweep across the UK on Friday, followed by scattered showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.