

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 28 Aug 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A bright and breezy day with sunny spells for most places and a scattering of showers, these most likely in the west and the north, while southeast England probably stays mostly dry. Windy in the northwest. This evening and overnight, most places dry for a time, but further showery rain pushing into western and northern areas through the night.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Wednesday unsettled with rain or showers for most, heavy at times and perhaps thundery in places. On Thursday, still showery at first, but showers becoming confined to eastern parts of the UK by afternoon, with drier and brighter conditions elsewhere.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.