

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 28 May 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:

A cool and breezy day with showers to the north and west. Some of these will be heavy with a wintry element over higher ground in northern Scotland and a risk of hail and thunder. Drier and brighter elsewhere. Further showers in the north tonight. Southern and central parts clearer at first, cloudier weather and rain, heavy at times, later.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Early rain, that will be heavy at times, will slowly move away eastwards with brisker conditions and showers following. Blustery showers continue to the north and west. Drier and brighter for most on Saturday with some bright spells and sunshine.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.