++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloud and rain will clear eastwards this morning. Brighter but cooler, windy conditions will follow with showers, mainly in the north and west. There is a risk of localised severe gales developing in northwest Scotland later. A windy night and dry with clear spells for many, but some showers continuing in the west and northwest.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Generally dry but windy with bright or sunny spells at first on Monday. However, cloud and locally heavy rain will arrive in the west late afternoon, accompanied by further severe gales. Wet and very windy at first on Tuesday, becoming drier with winds easing later.
