++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloudy for most with rain and drizzle at times, but brighter and drier across parts of northern Scotland. The rain will then become heavier in western areas later. Overnight, mostly dry in the east and for Northern Ireland, but rain will continue in western parts, becoming heavy and persistent later in the southwest.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Heavy and persistent rain on Thursday for parts of southwest England, Wales, northwest England and parts of Scotland. Elsewhere, mainly dry, and becoming bright and rather warm in the southeast. Friday, rather cloudy with some light rain around, but more rain moving into western areas later.
