

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 20 Jun 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Bright and breezy across Scotland and Northern Ireland with scattered sharp showers. Turning increasing overcast across southern counties of England and the far south of Wales, with intermittent light rain. Elsewhere across England and Wales, it will be predominantly fine and dry today. Central and northern areas mainly dry tonight, but turning increasingly wet across southern England and southern Wales.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Rain, heavy in the west, will spread north to northern England and Northern Ireland by the afternoon and Scotland during the evening and night. Wet across Scotland and Northern Ireland on Sunday, while slowly brightening up from the west elsewhere.

(C) Crown Copyright 2008. Published by the Met Office.