

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 02 Dec 2006

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain will linger in the far southeast, though it should turn drier here later.
Brighter elsewhere with a few showers in the west, locally heavy. Tonight will be very wet and windy. Heavy rain and gale or severe-gale force winds are expected with some damaging gusts in parts of the Southwest, Wales and around the Irish-sea in particular.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Early rain on Sunday will clear the southeast with blustery showers following to all parts, heavy and prolonged at times in the north. Very windy with severe gales in places. More rain will spread north during Monday reaching most parts by evening.

(C) Crown Copyright 2006. Published by the Met Office.