++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A windy start for much of the UK, especially Scotland and northern England where gales are possible. There will be showers or rain for many areas, with persistent rain for Scotland and north England this morning but rain generally eases by tonight with many places becoming dry. Winds ease in the south by tonight.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Mainly dry and sunny for most of England and Wales during Saturday, perhaps with the odd shower, but further cloud and rain from the Pennines northwards. More cloud and spells of rain on Sunday, but staying drier, brighter and warmer in southern and eastern England.
