

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 23 Sep 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
After a chilly and bright start for many the brightest weather will become confined to southeastern parts as cloud and patchy rain in the northwest spreads southeastwards across England and Wales. Brighter, showery conditions will follow into the northwest later and overnight as rain continues to affect southern areas occasionally through the night.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Early cloud and rain will clear the southeast of England leaving a bright and breezy day for many with scattered showers, locally heavy and thundery in the north, developing. Blustery showers will clear from northern parts on Friday leaving plenty of fine, dry weather for many.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.