++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most areas will be dry with sunny spells today. However, showers are likely across southeast England this morning, and northern Scotland will be cloudy. Breezy in the southeast and far north. It will be cool and dry for most overnight with clear periods, although the north and west of Scotland will be cloudier with some rain.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Wednesday will be mainly dry with some warm sunshine, and central parts should remain fine on Thursday. However, northern Scotland will have patchy rain throughout, and thundery downpours are possible in the south on Thursday. Breezy across the extreme north and south of Britain.
