++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Early showers with some thunder are likely in the south and east this morning. Further thunderstorms are likely in east Wales and England this afternoon, with northern England most likely affected. The daytime thunderstorms will clear away eastwards tonight. Cloudier conditions with outbreaks of rain will move into Northern Ireland and western Scotland, but elsewhere will become clear and dry.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Friday will start bright for many, with warm sunny spells developing. The cloud will thicken for most in the afternoon, with patchy rain for Northern Ireland and southern Scotland. Saturday will be changeable and cooler, but warm in the southeast.
